"That corner of the world has smiles for me beyond all other places!"

Veritas et Gaudium

Dedication

During our high school years at Park, we have come to value and admire this dedicated member of the faculty. Daily we see her extending her glowing warmth and friendship to everyone at the Park School. In the classroom or on the athletic fields, we find her equally concerned for the growth and welfare of others.

But we, as a class, are even more profoundly affected by her presence. She not only advised and educated us, she believed in us. When a feeling of defeat or insecurity arose, there was always one person who never lost faith in our abilities. It was at these moments that she would smile enthusiastically and build our confidence by the encouraging tone of her remarks. Whether we came to her with a personal or academic problem, we were always greeted with a flow of optimism and assurance. All hardships seemed small when we accepted her wise philosophy.

Now, upon leaving Park, it is with a deep sense of gratitude and appreciation that we, the Senior Class of 1964, dedicate this yearbook to Mrs. Diana Z. Stafford.

Prologue

"Two cheers for democracy: one because it admits variety and two because it permits criticism."

We need not defend Park School. Even if we wanted to, we could not, because it is more than a school. Park is a concept which cannot be communicated to outsiders. It just is and it is ours.

Park is unique among private schools, for it does not have a select, stereo-typed enrollment. It breeds not narrowness, but concern. We have found at Park not only an academic institution, a series of classrooms, texts and tests, but indeed a whole way of life. It is an Experiment in Living of which we are all integral parts. There is room and demand for each of us as a contributing individual. We have learned to appreciate individuality rather than condemn it, for such is the Park School way. Park has truly taught us the meaning of responsibility, of obligation to the self and to the community. We have the right to create and destroy and recreate. We, as Park School students, build Park in the image we hold for Park. We reap the rewards of our own efforts.

Our life is an exploration into social and political organization. Park is a miniature World, and a preparation for that world which we must face when we leave.

Seniors

"If I did not work, these worlds would perish."

As freshmen, whether we had been at Park School for Middle School or not, we spent our year in search of friends, of Park's meaning, of what to do, and of how to do it.

When we came back to the school as sophomores, we found that we now had some status and we glided along on this without much action.

In our junior year we began to take on much of the governmental responsibility. We participated in the Cambridge Exchange, from which came many new ideas, which have been put into practice this year. The most significant thing we did was to begin to think and feel like a class, one that had a large stake in the school; Mrs. Stafford had begun to get through to us. Junior year was not just one of serious school involvement. Who, of those of us who saw it, will ever forget the magnificence of Mr. Reynold's combination apartment-warehouse-mouse-hole, or the gala party after work day?

This September, we entered as Seniors. We came face to face with the problem of college, of thesis, and of leading the school. It came to us that all this work was in preparation for leaving Park. The thesis would be a part of our graduation requirements. A college would take us away. We realized that our work would benefit both us and those who would come after us. Park School had become inextricably mixed with our growth; if it became better, then so would we. We have done our best to make Park what we thought it could and should be.

Now we are leaving Park, and we know our years here have been worth the effort. Park has taught us, if not the answers to the riddle of life, perhaps the right questions to ask about it.

"I have yet to encounter that common myth of weak men, an insurmountable barrier."

Possessor of an analytical mind, Carl has a capacity for clear, concise thought which has increased considerably in the past three years, particularly as a result of Period E classes.

At a time when some students were apathetic about Park, and others were concerned about the situation but unsure what to do, Carl, as Council president, provided a new source of discipline, unity, and respect. His dedication and determination are evident at all times, whether he is handling a council agenda, a slide rule, or a tennis racket.

He is quiet but not withdrawn; his subtle humor and his unique ability to successfully manage four hours of homework in one hour are often a source of amusement and mock despair on the part of fellow seniors. Only Carl could work in school all day, play badminton all evening, and still have a writing sample in before nine the next morning.

Carl is an unforgettable student and friend, and his memories of Park will be as significant as his influence upon it.

John Griffin Lesher

Would you be quiet, please?!" The familiar voice checks the confusion and mumbling in class meeting. In John's position as class president, we are aware of his ability to combine successfully business and pleasure, for even a stern look during class meeting can hardly hide John's continuous good nature.

John's successes are not measured only by his large circle of friends. He has channeled his energy in many directions, as responsible student, class president, and captain of the soccer team. He has met with equal facility the challenge of classes, of sports, and of government. Popular and respected, he will not soon be forgotten by those who were privileged to call him friend.

"Let us work, for work is the father of pleasure, but let us never fret."

"What wisdom can you find that is greater than kindness."

"Latest articles are due on Friday—typed!", is the persistent cry of the editor. Beth undertakes this job, as all her many others, with diligence and concern. The editor's position, one of honor and responsibility, has been awarded to a girl of outstanding literary talent. How often has her tendency to be "wordy" been the object of fun on the part of her English teachers!

Although Beth's antics, such as drawing rabbits on the blackboards between classes, frequently interrupt her more important endeavors, it has been her maturity and her seriousness of purpose which have most profoundly influenced our class.

Bonnie Lily Becker

"Here is continual spring, and summer in months foreign to summer."

The back door of the main building flies open, and a dark-haired girl dashes through on her way to a small red structure near the bookstore. Who else but Bonnie, making her famous Streeter Sprint?! Bonnie is new to Park, but Park did not long remain new to Bonnie. She has become involved in the A.F.S. Committee and is an avid patron of the ski bus. She is one of the best-dressed and most constantly cheerful of the senior girls; both her appearance and her high spirits have made her welcome on campus.

"We cannot learn men from books."

Bruce Bleichfeld

Bruce always has a point of view and he always expresses it candidly. His opinions are often surprising; his wit is indescribable, and unfailing even on Monday mornings.

Cast as Paulus in Cry, the Beloved Country, he spoke both as Bruce and Paulus in his plea for individual rights. We can picture Bruce petitioning for senior privileges and saying, "We may not get 'em this time, and we may not get 'em next time, but we'll get 'em."

If a poll were taken, the class of '64 would undoubtedly vote Bruce its one really unique member. Sometimes maddening, sometimes shocking, sometimes hysterically funny, but never boring: this is Bruce.

Henry is an irrespressible extrovert, whose driving energy and indomitable enthusiasm make him a leader in many fields. His voice, a 150 decibel trademark, may be heard booming across the athletic fields or coolly piercing the chaos of a class debate. Quick to defend his varied, firmly-held opinions, he thrives on controversy and will plunge into an argument no matter what the odds. He drives himself onward to an ever-higher standard of excellence, seeking perfection in all he does. His explosive personality, tempered by a certain intellectual dignity, has made Henry an influential person in the school community.

"The young man walks by himself, fast but not fast enough, far but not far enough; he must catch the last subway, the streetcar, the bus, run up all the gang-planks, register at all the hotels, work in all the cities, answer all the want-ads, learn all the trades, take up all the jobs. One job is not enough, one life is not enough." from USA by John Dos Passos.

This quote, taken from a book which has been a favorite of Ted's, portrays a feeling evident in his actions; in Ted we recognize a feeling of independence and the courage to act upon this independence. He cannot and will not be content until he has satisfied his many diversified desires and dreams. For Ted, the knowledge of books alone can never be adequate; he must have the knowledge of experience. There will always be a little bit of everything for this man.

"A little bit of everything for this man."

Michael Carl Burwick

"A fervent and diligent man is prepared for all things."

This man roams the campus with but one intent. His trusty weapon always at his side, he catches his prey unaware, quickly takes aim, and always shoots to kill. Many a student and faculty member has fallen victim to his dead-eye shot. He shoots without mercy . . . "itchy-trigger-finger-Mike" they call him. So beware, for though he's known as one of the nicest and friendliest seniors on the campus, that one time you want to remain unseen—the time you try to snatch some extra cookies, the time you have to stick your gum to the bottom of a chair to avoid being caught, the time you throw a snowball at your "favorite" teacher—if you hear that deadly click, you know you've been captured forever by Park's own Candid Camera.

Susan Caldwell

There is only one way to describe Sue; she is genuine. She has a knowledge and a truth that can come only from within. We see in her a certain mastery of life, a way of making those around her feel important, which is a result of her very real love and concern for all people. We do not look to Sue only for facts from the mind; we look to her for a rare understanding and philosophy from the heart. Park School met Sue, and knew that this was a girl who would give her all, and to whom Park would give its all in return.

Linda is the rare person who possesses in full measure the capacity to enjoy and to make others enjoy. "Camps" can be depended upon for her apt and candid appraisal of any situation, and is usually the cause of seventeen senior girls dying from hysterics. She is a charming combination of naïveté and natural good humor; she is a girl of extremes, burning with indignation, yet on the lighter side, matchless with wit. Linda is a study in nonchalance, yet accepts her responsibilities with admirable zeal. She is truly the dearest and cheeriest and funniest of all the senior girls.

Mary Louise Cooley

. . . And in the Annual Spring Kite Contest, sponsored by the faculty of the Park School, honors go to Mary Louise Cooley for the "Parkest" kite. Mary goes to the head of the Class of '64 for her unsurpassable school spirit. Park has been an invaluable experience for Mary, largely because Mary has been invaluable to Park. She is indeed the paragon of a Park Schooler.

It is this deep concern, this awareness, this devotion which is striking about Mary. She is always sensitive to feelings amiss, and anxious to restore good will. Her concern carries over into her academic life, where she is one of the most naturally curious and consistently thorough students in the class. We know that Mary is a "biology bug" and has worked summers at Children's Hospital. Here again is her concern for others.

As girls' Sports Editor for the Latest, Mary has combined her athletic agility with a facility for writing. Fighting in a game or writing about it, Mary is dependability to a T.

Certainly no one could have a harsh word for this girl who has a harsh word for no one.

His sarcastic remarks shatter any dull atmosphere.
He is known as Big Huey throughout the campus.
His influence and his ability to organize have aided him well in his position as chairman of United Fund.
He is capable of completing any project, and is especially fond of rolling girls down the hill in winter.
His tenacity and unflagging spirit have made him respected, particularly on the athletic field.
He has excelled in every sport every year.
His name is . . . JIM!

Chris is the senior "surprise package." Beneath a subdued and stable exterior is a razor-sharp mind, a warmth and a feeling for others. He is the boy who can take up life nonchalantly and still come out on top. He is the boy who can dance up a storm in the latest and greatest style, and bring down the house with his laugh. Chris's clear and powerful voice can be counted on for the Tuesday music sessions and for a primary role in productions. He is a boy of many talents, a man who is enemy to none.

John Reinhold Engelhardt

"In the path where you have begun well, may you always continue to tread."

John, a senior-year addition to the class of '64, has settled comfortably into the Park school scheme of things. As a top-notch halfback for the Orange and Brown booters, he exhibited power and precision. John is rarely seen without his slow but devilish grin, a symbol both of his joyful acceptance of life and of his friendly nature. It is John with the laughing eyes who has set the seniors laughing with his calm, deliberate, objective, and droll appraisal of life.

David Erion Eppers

"Wit and wisdom are born with a man."

DAVID—always the one who is willing to do what must be done, always the one who accepts the responsibility, always the one who gets the job done, gets others doing it with him, gets them enjoying it. He is always one of the first to support any new project, and undoubtedly holds the record for the greatest number of class-committee chairmanships. In his three years at Park, David has probably contributed more effort, ideas, talent, friendship, and wit to the school, its members, and its various activities than anyone else. We can never forget his performance as Feste in Twelfth Night, his enthusiasm whenever the Cambridge Exchange is mentioned, his comical despair over writing samples, or his concern for the success of Western Day. We pay high tribute to David Eppers when we say that he is, indeed, a true Park Schooler.

Judith Ann Fegley

"I was never less alone than when by myself."

Judi throws herself heart and soul into whatever she does, always giving her all and then some. Her motto might well be, "Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well!" This is demonstrated both by her academic and athletic achievements. Scholastically, her serious attitude gained her an early acceptance to Pembroke College. Judi is involved in so many activities that one never knows where to find her, or even where to start looking. Not always studious, she is an adept lummi player, as she publicly demonstrated at the Graduation Dance last year.

Her mien, a contrast of the light and the serious, her active participation, and her friendliness to everyone have made her an intrinsic part of Park, a personification of Park's ideals.

Alexander John Ferris

A boy of few words, Alex is noted for his taciturnity. He seldom displays any emotion, yet he is a sensitive person who brings a deep determination to all he does. Those of the class who know him well are aware of his appreciative wit and enjoy his calm, unobtrusive manner.

"And to conclude, I know myself a man."

As he travels about campus in his nonchalant manner, John may be clad in his familiar bear fur coat or bright bow tie. Good-natured and fun-loving, John ranks high among the more verbose members of the class. We may catch him in the classroom setting forth his opinions with firm conviction, or joking with upper schoolers on the late bus. As a sailing enthusiast, he is ready at any time to relate his numerous experiences in a slightly mischievous tone.

Although serious at necessary moments, John will be most remembered for his humorous antics and optimism, which often cheered a weary senior.

Sharon Lee Greenfield

Sharon's bubbly good humor can be suppressed no longer, so she melts into uncontrollable giggles in the back of the class. Her antics make her often appear flighty, perhaps because her hands threaten to take off whenever she talks. Behind the giggling and the waving hands, is an immeasurable amount of energy which somehow gets her involved in almost everything; she invariably makes any project successful. Sharon's imagination and inventiveness have earned her praise time and again, and one might recall particularly her efforts for last year's class day program. Surely Sharon will never forget those senior caricatures spread all over the auditorium floor at nine o'clock the night before the program!

Sharon's contributions to Park can never be counted, but she would not deny that she has been well rewarded. Park will remember Sharon as a person, for her lively enthusiasm, and as a student, for her work and concern in all areas, from Production to French IV.

My opinion? It is mine. Football? My forte. Persistence? My guide. Strength? My attribute. Strength, persistence, common sense, these words are easily applicable to Rick. They describe him on the football field; they describe him in his opinions.

He is unpredictable in his moods, jokingly loud one minute, curiously silent the next. We have seen him going hell-bent-for-leather through campus, his only goal the parking lot. We have seen him serious in history class discussing a current political situation. Rick, with his variety of interests, is a contrast of mood and expression, and a definite part of the Park School atmosphere of individualism.

"The countenance is the portrait of the mind, the eyes are its informers."

Barbara Ann Howell

Although Barbie is known as the penguin of the senior class, she does not consider everything in black and white terms. Her unusual perceptivity is apparent both in her creative writing and in her relationships with others in and out of the school community. Despite the constant strain of a heavy schedule and the demanding responsibilities of her yearbook editor's position, Barb always maintains her refreshing vivacity, laughing even while complaining about homework.

Barbie has taken full advantage of all that Park has to offer, scholastically, as one of the highest ranking students in her class, and athletically, as the captain of the girls' soccer team, cheerleader, and ardent skier. She has truly realized and experienced the purpose and spirit of a Park School education; as a result, she is now capable of understanding her own potential, and of using it to its highest capacity.

Robert Howard Jacobstein

Bob's financial wizardry and cynical wit are his hallmarks, marks which place him above and beyond the ordinary. Treasurer of the Upper School, he has been Park School's leading financier since time immemorial, and is the key man each year in Country Fair, Production, and dances. His daring wit never ceases to amaze his friends, as he frequently shatters the intellectual atmosphere, to the despair of his teachers. The axe will never fall, however, for even the professors of learning cannot help but be amused by his unpredictable humor.

Behind his bizarre facade, along with the telephone hidden in his jacket and the hated math notebook, Bob possesses an intelligent and analytical mind. An outstanding individual in every case, he is one of the select few whom it is impossible to forget.

"A man is not idle because he is absorbed in thought. There is a visible labor and there is an invisible labor."

Glee Club 4; Football 4; Basketball 4;
Baseball 4.

Tom combines a quick wit, a glib tongue, and an encyclopedic knowledge of the "Bullwinkle Show" to keep us constantly in stitches. He has a stock but unexpected comment to meet any situation. A new boy at Park this year, Tom quickly became an interested and telling commentator in senior class meetings. An eager individual, Tom is seldom on the outside of things, and one hardly expects that he ever will be.

Kathy takes time to look at, and to consider as important, the small things so many of us overlook. She takes time to enjoy the things we think we have no time for. She sees the value of the total education, but her easy-going manner does not permit her to get upset about one history quiz or a single English paper. Kathy's patience and calm, casual way will serve her well in her chosen profession of teaching.

The eyes are the sum of the man. They have the devil in them. They register fire and determination. They can, on occasion, droop in despair.

The philosophy of the life is central to the life. Live easily, enjoy always, help others enjoy; life is all too short.

Humor is the means for expressing the philosophy. A wit that hits the target every time, a low chuckle, a gleaming eye, a lightning smile.

Moderation is the path to longer life. Run easy and win; shoot steady and score.

To be natural is above all else. Play with natural coordination, speak what is in the mind, and act with spontaneous feeling.

Pieter Michael Lechner

"There is nothing so difficult that cleverness cannot overcome it."

There is a quality about him which defies description. Perhaps it is his quick sly wit, which, from behind his reserved almost sleepy exterior, leaps like lightning, and leaves behind it peels of laughter. Perhaps it is his deep determination to succeed, a current which runs strong beneath an easy-going facade. Perhaps it is the leadership by which he has attained several high positions in the past four years—twice class president, captain of three varsity teams. Perhaps it is simply the manner he brings to all these things, for above all he is natural, a man without pretense.

Linda Lee Lewis

New to Park in her sophomore year, Linda made her entrance into the school community via the art studio. Her creativity and artistry have often been of great help in school projects, involving scenery or decorations—she's an expert at papier maché!

Her amiability and compatability are two of Linda's greatest attributes. She is willing to be friends with anyone and anything except the morning buses. She often lends her smile to the person who left his at home.

Her voice was ever soft, gentle, and low, an excellent thing in woman.

John August Mayer

John Mayer—a proper noun often used as a synonym for skier. John is known at Park and throughout this area for his outstanding performance on the ski slopes. When the yearly sports awards are handed out, John invariably walks away with every prize available to the skier. Through his combined attributes of skill, effort, and courage, he has gained the recognition he so well deserves.

John lives at the slopes, but he is essential to the seniors on those five days a week when he must live at Park as well. He thoroughly enjoys life, and it is the reflection of this enjoyment which so often puts spirit into a depressed group of seniors suffering from thesisitis. His amiability, good nature and charm are evident in his slow smile and dark eyes. A boy inclined to please, he will be remembered with admiration in the years to come.

Gary Herbert Mols

No one but Gary could ever be so consistently late to history class and still get there on time. Late as he may be to class, however, he is never late to a game. He has been the backbone of three varsity teams throughout his Upper School years. One of the most congenial of the senior boys, Gary is liked and respected by underclassmen and seniors alike. Although noticeably quiet in his first two years, Gary has become considerably more outgoing, to the delight of those who have recently discovered his ready and amusing wit.

Linda is the only girl who can casually and accurately tell you the day and year when your left white knee sock was inside out. She is the only girl who can tell you, in the special language she brings to Park, that her hair "reeks and is the absolute death." All the while, she looks like something out of this month's Vogue. Linda is the authority on every new dance and she has the natural coordination to prove it. She is the one who on "intellectual days" wears her glasses straight through school. She is a Pioneer of the twelve year variety, with a voice loud enough to make cheerleading, but never the cheerleading picture.

The Spark is the only place we've ever had ink enough to print the name of this girl whose languid brown eyes are the key to her sweetness, her innocence, and her world. In Linda we are aware of a perception keyed to the best in us all, a best we might never have known but for her.

Robert Edward Morrison

*"Aloof with hermit-eye I scan
the present work of present

Robby is imposing yet unassuming. His tall, lanky frame, easy smile, and shock of blond hair make him easy to spot around campus. He is quiet, content with the world as he finds it. Not without ambition, however, he brings to his work a pertinacity that gets the job done. In his work he never calls attention to himself; in this way the work mirrors the man. Nevertheless, his efforts are always more than adequate, the solid production of a good follower.

While retaining her Indian ways, Shashi has constantly out-done us in her knowledge of American history! She has not spoken often of her native land, yet by her very presence, we have absorbed an awareness of the dignity of the Indian people.

We shall hate to see gentle Shashi leave, but she will leave, having enriched us in knowledge and experience. In sharing with this delightful visitor our American ways, we have become more aware of their meaning in our own lives. We only hope we have done as much for Shashi, as she obviously has done for us.

David Edward Nitterauer

Teddy—physically and morally the mainstay of the Senior Class. Teddy—the center of strength, organization and concern.

The "bull" in training is unbeatable. A formidable foe on the athletic field, Teddy has earned a steady place on three varsity teams and has captained two successful CUPS squads in his four years at Park.

Ted is undeniably a leader. He has indisputable command over the Dining Room Committee and over the class of '64. However, it is not enough to have leadership ability. It is meaningless without the respect and affection of the followers; these also Ted has earned.

Talent, above all, is man's coveted prize. Sing for us and dance; paint for us and play. Race with her in sports if you will. Again you cannot beat her. Tecla can do all, and more. It is her wealth of talent which, indeed, makes Tecla an enviable girl.

But natural ability cannot shine alone. It needs to couple with the interest, and the devotion, and the will, which Tecla displays in her love of nature and of the physical sciences.

She lives in a world of beauty and of form. Call this girl what you will, but call her first, Artist.

Sarah Lynn Roberts

Sarah may tell you that she is always calm, cool and collected in a crisis, but her clacking bracelets give her away. As she runs about campus (she never slows down long enough to walk), one almost expects her to be carrying an easel and canvas, instead of the customary load of books. Her excitable sensitivity, and innate talent have made her an excellent artist, indispensable to several committees including the yearbook staff. For this girl, life is a ride on a high-flying swing, where people are more important than things, and living is more important than anything.

Order: Solution to the day's calculus problem.

Delivery: With a sly grin and a wry running commentary.

This is the sum of Danny, whose approach to mathematics is his approach to life—straightforward, direct and accurate. His one quibble with math is that it leaves no room for the facetiousness which is irrepressible in him. The uncontested king of the calculus class, his penetrating questions display an inquiring mind. He is the boy who defies conformity, who dares to be himself. He meets life's obstacles entirely on his own, and his percentage of success is remarkable. Self-willed and immovable, Danny does things as he wants to do them and invariably he does them well.

Petite but powerful is Joanie; she is of strong will, with the energy to translate will into action. Her own small size is no indication of the size of her influence in senior class meeting, where her opinions are sound and strong, because she truly believes them to be. Joanie is one who has learned that to get something done, she must do it herself; however, her persuasive powers assure her of never having to do anything alone. Not content to be a spectator, she is happiest when she is in the action, and happier still when she is leading it.

Ann is the first to sense a disturbance in another, and the last to burden others with her own troubles. She rarely reveals her own feelings to other people, and perhaps for this reason, writing has been a favored pastime. Her love for writing is second only to her dream of a career in nursing. Nursing requires dedication, and this Ann is willing to give. A truly sensitive and loving soul, she cares deeply for all people. Ann is not easily perturbed; her calm acceptance of all life's aspects has given her the maturity necessary to achieve her goal.

Paul Wischerath believes in the maxim, "Don't take life too seriously; you will never get out of it alive"; nevertheless, Paul has more common sense and maturity than many of his so-called "brainier" contemporaries. A good athlete, Paul was an outstanding member of an outstanding football team; he is an unbelievable extrovert for whom the world is really a stage. Among the more famous of his antics were his one man chorus line in music and his heroics at the Lakemont - at - Park basketball game. One of the great individuals of the senior class, Wally can be neither overlooked nor forgotten by anyone at any time.

"Strong beliefs win strong men, and then make them stronger."

Janice Jaye Wolf

"A sense of gladness seldom falls into madness."

An inimitable "So?" at the end of a long calculus proof, and a wild dash for the parking lot at the earliest possible moment characterize Janice, whose faith in the lighter side of life is indicative of her lively and spirited mind. Janice has a knack for accomplishing everything while appearing to do nothing; yet, her seemingly frivolous manner does not obscure a strong belief in the worth of a complete education. Often impulsive and easily excited, Janice has used her effusive energy to good advantage in the diversified areas of education offered at Park.

Christopher Anthony Wright

A boy with rare persistence and courage, Chris pursues his goals with unwavering seriousness. Not one of the better known, but certainly one of the school's ablest questioners, Chris is the all-important counterweight to the complicated machinery of government. A quiet, intense young man, Chris will often offer useful suggestions and comments on the work of his contemporaries. Perhaps it is his all-important facility for piercing analysis that makes Chris a person well worth knowing.

This year the members of our class, wise and knowing juniors, have taken a more active role in many of the school committees and activities. The class has learned to concentrate its power and spirit in order to solve the many problems which have arisen. Though the year has been difficult, we have benefitted greatly by the knowledge gained through acceptance of our new responsibilities. As juniors, we realized more fully than ever before the unlimited scope of education which Park has opened before us.

Small foresight skips across
And leaves behind a scuffing path;
Profit in anger, profit and loss,
Covered by a cloudy wrath.

Hard in the cold and slightened tracks,
The signs of mind and body free
In age, swinging with burning hopes,
Are footprints longing to be free.

On they go, past the bounds
Of whips and belts and parent braces;
Around a tree and on again,
An old man now, dead in his traces.

After a year as the youngest of the Upper School, we have now moved onward and upward to a more mature, responsible position. Despite the added burdens of Sophomore year, we have found new ways to have fun as a class. During the past year, the bonds of unity in our class have strengthened, and we have added class influence in many school projects. It has even appeared conceivable that one day we shall be the eldest and handle the leadership of the school.

TO THE FRESHMEN

. . . "no one was a stranger . . ."
. . . "so excited my hands were shaking . . ."
. . . "work for your freedom . . ."
. . . "seniors . . . beyond description . . ."
. . . "more decisions . . ." . . . "more responsibilities . . ."
. . . "chaos . . ."

These were your impressions of Upper School; these were the things you said and thought about those first wonderful, terrible weeks. The initial excitement has gone now, but more remains than just work and responsibility and decision. There remains that spirit which is the beginning of your love for Park and what Park will give to you. You have just begun to know and experience a school and a philosophy which will bring you to maturity. As freshmen, you began on the road to that maturity, a road which will wind through exciting and torturous ways; one which will elate and depress you. Most of all, it will bring to you a love of challenge and it will leave with you a love for this school. Your true feelings for Park will not be shown with banners and flags; it will be apparent as you return year after year, even after graduation.

You have changed in many ways during the past year, and you will continue to grow and change until you, as seniors, give Park's message to the freshmen class below you, as we have given it to you.

Why does he feel
He is like
A wrinkled orange peel
Discarded in the gutter,
Floating down the muddy
River of rain water?
Why does he see
Processions
Of men who have lived,
Who have come from nothingness,
Why do they seem
Worthless, void of value
To his eyes?
They have lived;
They have died.
They are forgotten,
Not mourned for long.
Life, death, forgetting,
Words that are meaningless
But for the picture puzzle—
Life.

THE LONG WAIT

I walked along in the winter of life, and paused to warm my heart in one of the moments of comfort She throws out to us. Fate was there, and Chance, and even Life Herself; their presence took away some of the precious warmth. Chance looked at me, and wondered whether I might not like to go with Her and follow my luck; I said, "No," that I was waiting for something. Fate was next to leave, and She, too, asked me to go with Her, but I still thought I would wait. Then Life, the grandest of Them all, offered me her best, but I said, "No," and let Her go on, and settled back to wait for Spring.

Upper School Council

The Council has recognized that school government must be school government and not council government. It has tried this year to extend to all the opportunity to participate actively in school affairs. Town meetings have been provided for discussion of issues and committees have worked on detailed issues. Council has attempted to give the entire student body a sense of community responsibility through bus and study hall proctoring systems. The Council strongly feels that student government can be effective as a force for individual and community growth, only when the student body becomes entirely aware of it and its implications.

The Spark Editors

The SPARK is composed of three main boards: the Art Board, which is responsible for page layout and drawings; the Business Board, which directs yearbook sales and fundraising; and the Literary Board, which concerns itself with the selection and writing of all literary work in the SPARK. The photographers for the yearbook are organized under the direction of the Art Board. They often take and develop the pictures.

It was our hope this year to add an original trend in layout, colors, informals, and, more particularly, the sectional divider sheets. The staff has worked diligently to improve the thought as well as form of the SPARK.

We are a diversified committee and therefore represent in our group the varied personalities on the Park School Campus. Conflict and success have gone hand in hand.

Art Board and Photography Board

Mrs. Ernst, advisor

Business Board

Literary Board

The Latest

The Latest is the monthly student publication of the Park School, which is printed by the students at the school. This past year, with mechanical limitations well in hand, the Latest has made a bid for more enthusiastic and diverse student support. It has established, by publishing accurate and informative accounts of school affairs, a more permanent function in the school community than monthly entertainment. Most important, the Latest has tried to be a sounding board for school controversies.

The Quest staff spends an extraordinary amount of time on just that—a quest for prose, poetry, art work, money, and student support. The result, a literary magazine of fine quality, is certainly worth the effort. It is a tribute to the creative ability of the Park School students.

The Financial Committee

Susie Doran, Robert Jacobstein, chairman; Lynne Doran, David Eppers, Susie Scheu.

The four class treasurers and the Upper School treasurer constitute the Financial Committee. This group approves and guides all school projects which are involved with money. It coordinates them with the Upper School activities.

Foreign Student Committee

The A.F.S. Committee is the school's representative in activities involving our foreign student. Of all the fund-raising drives organized throughout the year, the most important (and perhaps the most fun) is the pizza sale.

The committee keeps up a regular correspondence with Hu Hyun, our Korean war orphan. Packages and money are sent to him once a month. The student assembly is kept informed of all correspondence, and is encouraged to participate in all committee projects.

Bloom - let me tell you there is absolutely No Hope for you.

Mrs. Reynolds

Assembly Committee

It is the responsibility of the Assembly Committee to arrange interesting and informative assembly programs covering a variety of fields. Although accepting the value of movies and speakers, this year's committee felt a necessity for increased student participation and therefore turned several of the periods over to student activities and business.

First Row: Kezia Lechner, chairman; Michelle Hennin. Second Row: Carolyn Clement, Koko Hyde, John Greenberger, Mr. Reynolds, Scott Longstreth, Henry Bloom.

Dining Room

Committee

*First Row: John Purdy, Ted Nitterauer, chairman; Dan Cox, Bob Roehl.
Second Row: DeeDee Danahy, Barb Roehl, Claudia Eggleston.*

"Keep the noise down!" has been the motto of the committee this year in its steadfast efforts to make the dining room more pleasant and relaxing. No one could have had more fits and yet have done such a superb job as Ted Nitterauer. Realizing the need for greater efficiency, he started a third gong system to make getting trays easier and quicker. Complaints of too little eating time led the committee to make basic changes in the time arrangements. In response to several requests, a food survey was taken and new suggestions were welcomed so that meals might be made more enjoyable. Under Ted's energetic leadership, the dining room committee this year has been one of the most active on campus.

United Fund Committee

David Erenstoff, Debbie Hoffman, Mr. Hoyt, Jim Derrick, chairman; Nicky Jewett, Mike Burwick, Don Scheu, John Nesbitt.

This year during our fall drive, members of the Upper School visited several of the agencies aided by the United Fund, in order to get a clearer picture of the help we give with our pledges. Record hops and sales supplemented the pledging to fulfill the school's quota.

Building and Grounds Committee

First Row: Jim Tedesco, Read Boeckel, Nick Mamula, Robert Moore. Second Row: Doug Bougard, Larry Buck, chairman; John Engelhardt, Ron Hoy, Stephen Lalor.

The aim of the Building and Grounds Committee is to enhance the physical appearance of the campus. This year the committee took particular notice of the cluttered hallways, and built several book racks to help alleviate the problem. Enlisting the help of all the students, the committee organized and carried out the annual Spring Workday, which included a general cleanup of the whole campus.

Glee Club

"The heavens are telling" . . . the wonder of the Glee Club. This year for the first time a regular Glee Club was established in the Upper School. Under the direction of our new music man, Mr. Hofman the club met for rehearsal twice a week and made considerable progress. "Tidings of great joy" . . . it has brought, for the Glee Club is undoubtedly one of this year's most successful endeavors.

Park-Harley Committee

The Park-Harley Committee was responsible for the organization of the annual inter-school weekend, which was held this year at Park. In the hope of creating stronger student interest, the committee made several significant changes in the established program. The informality of the dinner parties and the hoote-nanny boosted the spirit tremendously. The one-topic discussion period on Saturday morning was very effectively handled. Plans were made with a representative group from Harley to discuss future weekends with the hope of continuing the new and successful ideas.

Country Fair Committee

Girls' Discussion Club

Freshmen Girls' Discussion Club
